

Application potential of laser subtractive microtechnologies

*Pavel Kožmín¹

¹HOFMEISTER s.r.o.

Keywords:

3D material ablation, laser interaction, laser beam, microcutting, microdrilling, surface microstructuring

Abstract:

With the expansion of digitization and automation of industrial production, it is possible to notice increasing requirements for the miniaturization of individual mechanical and electromechanical components and assemblies that need to be produced efficiently. It is therefore necessary to select the most suitable technologies for their production. Laser subtractive technologies, whose potential use will be discussed in this post, also come into consideration as one of the options.